

Parent Follow-up, Daily Tracking and the Year Plan

DATE	MEETING	CHAIR	PRESENT
Monday 21 Sep 2026	Hifz department	Head of Hifz, Maulana Nisar	Teachers and Principal

01 · PARENT COMMUNICATION

Recurring problems go home the same day, through one channel

Several emails went home today from the lead hifz teacher. One student takes two to three hours to say his sabak, yet says it in fifteen to twenty minutes when a teacher sits with him. Another is moving very slowly; his mother replied that ministry-exam homework takes his time at home, and the school answered that he needs daily accountability from both ends, since he only falls behind on days when nobody follows him.

The principal set the rule for the year: anything recurring is reported right away so it is corrected before it settles in. Teachers pass whatever needs to go home to the lead hifz teacher, at the start of the day or during it, and he sends the email; he holds every parent's contact details.

INDIVIDUAL CASE

The Hamidi brothers. They arrive after 9:00 almost every day, and one was seen on Friday with food from the IGA after slipping out for a few minutes. An email went home and another bus route was suggested. The older brother is new and is looking for loopholes to get outside, including asking other students who is allowed out. Keep an eye on him.

02 · DAILY TRACKING AND SUPERVISION

One sheet, checked every day; every student in front of you is yours

The taqsim list, which shows which students sit with which teacher, was read out in the meeting and a copy goes to the principal. With the sheet in front of them, teachers record sabak, sabqi and dawr for every student, every day, so that the weekly sit-down starts from a record rather than from memory. Each teacher is responsible for the students on their list and calls them up daily to check how much was done and push for more.

Responsibility does not stop at the list. There are about forty students outside the academic stream, and when one teacher is with a student, writing to a parent or dealing with something else, the others keep the room moving for whoever is in front of them, in their taqsim or not. The same applies during lunch and snack supervision: students slip through wherever there is no adult watching.

Seating was adjusted so that talkers are separated: Dawood now sits beside the lead teacher, and Ibrahim, who forms a group with Mustafa and Kabir, still needs a new place. The three Alvi brothers were added to the list, Hussain and Salahuddin with the second hifz teacher and Rayan with another teacher.

03 · THE YEAR PLAN

A projection for every student, ready for Monday 28 September

The year plan agreed earlier has not been started. For each student, the teacher writes down where the student is now and where they will realistically be by the end of the year at the current level of effort, and how far they could get with more. Students who give cause for concern are flagged. This is a professional estimate, not a calculation: a student who spent all of last year on the Qaida is the kind of judgment call expected.

The projection is what the parents receive, so the deadline follows the reports. It was first set for this Friday and then moved: teachers bring it to next Monday's meeting, and the principal sends the reports out on the Tuesday. The Qaida group's projections are already prepared.

DECISION

Deadline moved from Friday to Monday. Friday 25 September was considered and dropped because nothing had been started. Monday 28 September works since the reports only go out on Tuesday 29 September.

04 · STUDENTS TO WATCH

Daily pressure, and a parent call for the ones who drift

Abdul Rahman is very demotivated and does not listen; he works only when told he will lose part of his lunch. The principal's line is that he has the potential and simply has to be pushed, consistently. Dawood sleeps a great deal and needs the same pushing. Saqib is very slow with his sabak, does not say his dawr at home, missed a day or two last week and arrives late almost daily; his parents will be contacted. His brothers also miss days but progress far more.

Ibrahim is on his first juz and close to his sabak. He is motivated, but when he is stopped and held on a passage he shuts off completely; teachers let him keep moving and watch his motivation rather than his mistakes. Adam Khan has started his sabak and is motivated; his parents are in contact and he must say it to someone every day, otherwise he gets little done. He also came in late.

INDIVIDUAL CASE

Mustafa. Not doing well. His parents want him doing hifz at home although he cannot yet read, so he arrives having practised only two lines of what is set. His time at home should go to reading his nazira. The lead teacher writes to the parents; the principal wants them told plainly that this harms the system.

INDIVIDUAL CASE

Muhammad Ahmed. Refuses to read aloud and questions why he has to read at all, on both sides of the school. He responds when a teacher builds a connection with him first. Juz 29 and 30 went quickly, but juz 20 is very slow even split into parts. His father is to be informed: he placed him here for exactly this.

05 · PROGRESS NOTES

Several students are on track; keep the pace

Ismail is doing very well, working from the back and now on juz 8. Muhammad Kabir has started his sabak, said it today along with half a juz, and is far ahead of where he was last year; his father has been told he must say it to someone daily, and he still needs an eye kept on him. Yusuf has finished his juz and now repeats it until it holds with very few mistakes: the teacher circles and underlines every error so he sees exactly what to fix.

Hamza Khan has completed his reading on the other side but his Qaida is a little weak, so he does at least half of juz 29 at four or five lines a day before any hifz is started. One Qaida student, around lesson 11 or 12, listens and gets the work done but needs each lesson taught again the next morning; progress is slow but real, and the teacher tracks it daily.

06 · PORTAL AND EQUIPMENT

Nothing to print; more benches needed

Everything added for a student is registered on the portal, so nothing needs to be printed. The lead hifz teacher does not yet have his portal password or the scanning procedure and needs both.

The room needs more benches. The supplier used before, at about ten dollars each, has closed, and Amazon is more expensive. The principal does an inventory check on Tuesday.

To confirm before circulating

Two students named Ibrahim. The transcript has an Ibrahim Ahmed on the taqsim list and an Ibrahim among the Hamidi brothers. The seating change and the note about him shutting off when stopped may refer to different students.

Rayan Alvi's teacher. The name of the teacher Rayan sits with was garbled in the recording.

Unnamed students in the first two emails. The student taking two to three hours for his sabak and the one whose mother cited ministry-exam homework are not named clearly in the recording.

Portal access and benches. Neither the portal password and scanning procedure nor the benches were given a date; both are attributed to the principal by default.
